

Accomplishments & Milestones 2003

By Kevin Gorman, Executive Director, kevin@gorgefriends.org

The rebirth of the Klickitat Trail

The “comeback of the year” award goes to the Klickitat Trail. The 31-mile scenic rail bed seemed destined to non-use due to a handful of local land-owners and a hostile county commission. Residents organized peaceful trail hikes in late 2002 and in 2003 Friends helped launch the Klickitat Trail Conservancy, which now boast more than 200 members, most of whom are local residents. With local backing, the U.S. Forest Service agreed to manage half the trail and Washington State Parks and Klickitat Trail Conservancy are discussing management of the other half. The Goldendale Sentinel now lists the trail as one of Klickitat County's Ten Best Attractions even though the county commission continues to oppose it.

Nearly 800 acres purchased for public protection

The Forest Service continued its strong pace of land acquisition, acquiring 784 acres of land in 2003. The gem of the acquisitions was the 108-acre property along Major Creek. The land is a likely Lewis & Clark campsite. Forest Service efforts ended on a discouraging note, as they ran out of funds and expect only $1 million for acquisition in the coming year.

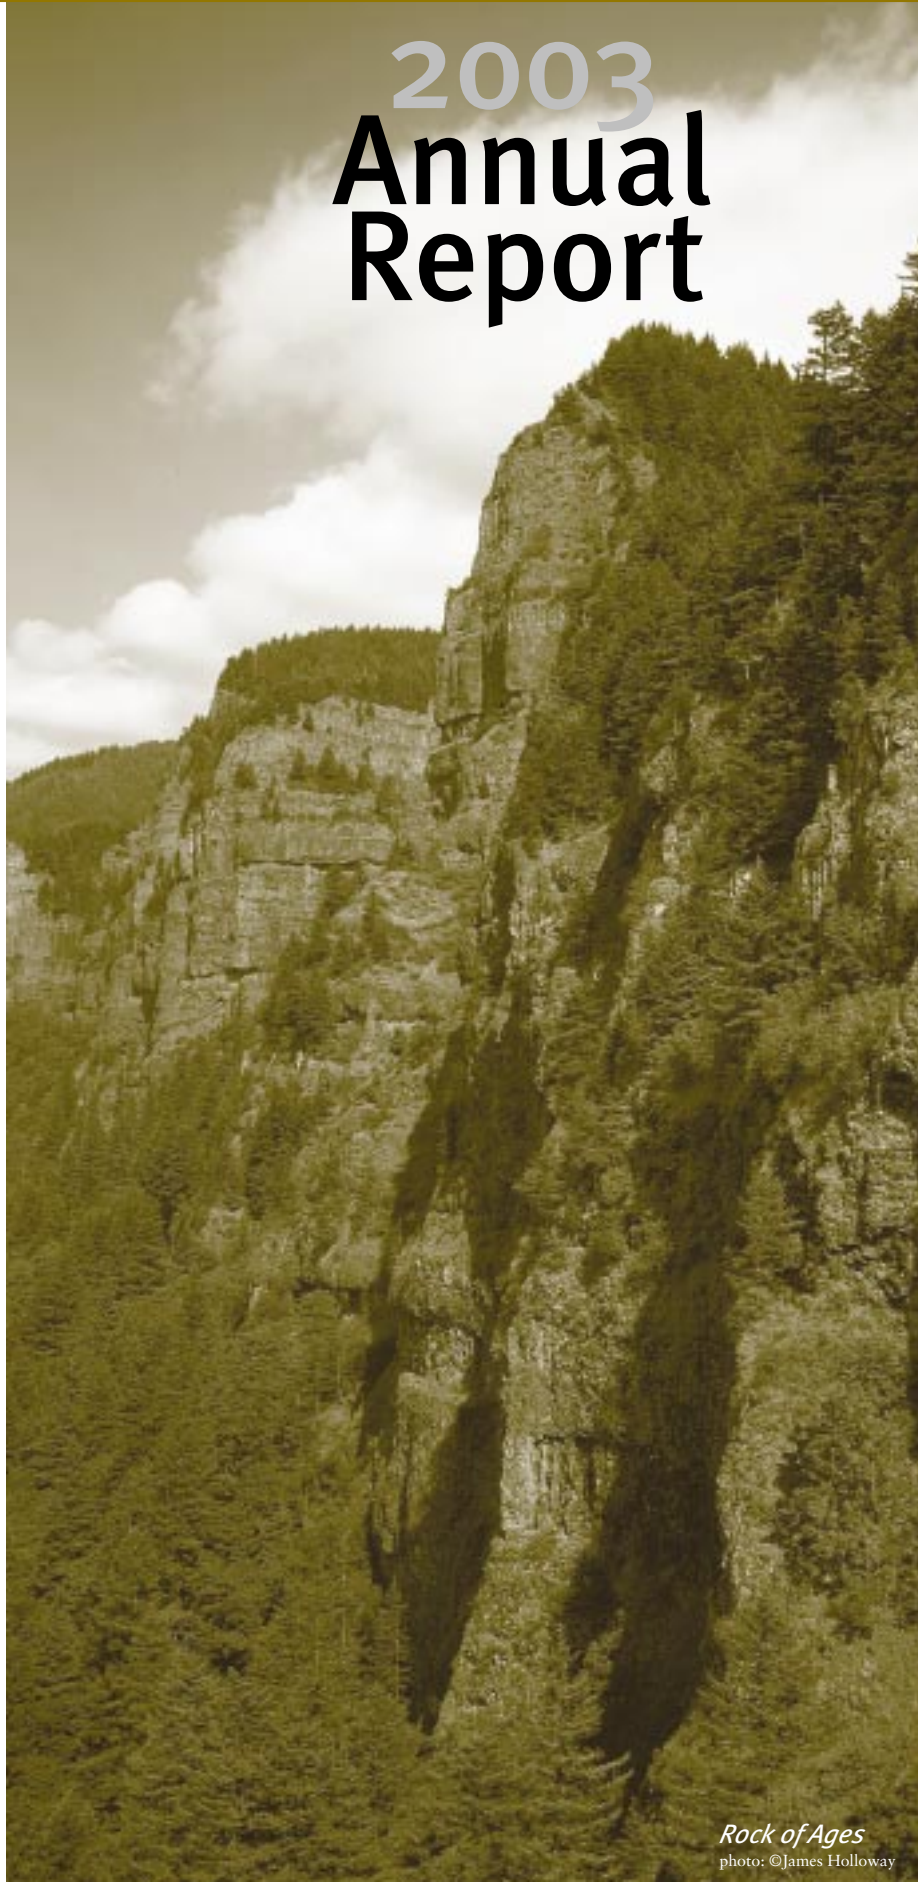

Removing the top story ends the story of the Bea House

The five-year saga of the Bea House came to a close in May as the Beas, the Gorge Commission and Skamania County reached an agreement to remove the top-story of the house and plant a buffer of trees to lessen its visibility. In exchange, the County and the Commission agreed to pay the Beas $300,000 for the work. Friends was part of the earlier settlement discussion, but left when given a “take it or leave it” offer that included a 26-foot addition to the house in full view of the Columbia River and I-84. As a result of our walking away from the settlement discussions and threatening legal action, the parties reconsidered and placed the addition to the house to the north, and out of sight.

Friends' members and major donors remain steadfast

As the economy continued to sputter, Friends continued to find generous support from our membership. Our major donor giving exceeded projections by over 20% and we had increases in new member and special appeal gifts. Thanks to everyone who gave us the resources to take on the many challenges facing the magnificent Columbia River Gorge.

Challenges & Accomplishments in 2003

► CONSERVATION & LEGAL PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

By Michael Lang, Conservation Director, michael@gorgefriends.org, & Nathan Baker, Staff Attorney, nathan@gorgefriends.org

Fighting Sprawl and Maintaining Strong Protection

In 2003 the Gorge Commission and Forest Service reviewed the National Scenic Area Management Plan and proposed revisions to policies and guidelines that protect the scenic beauty, natural heritage and cultural resources in the Gorge from the detrimental effects of new land uses and developments. Friends recruited thousands of citizens to write letters or provide testimony in favor of strengthening Gorge protection and opposing weaker Gorge protection standards. The results are mixed, but Friends and our allies have been able to derail efforts to significantly weaken Gorge protection. Management Plan review and revision will continue in 2004.

Watchdogs of the Gorge

In 2003, Friends of the Columbia Gorge maintained our watchdog role by commenting on every application for development in the National Scenic Area, reviewing more than 275 land use decisions, and filing appeals when necessary. Friends successfully appealed a Skamania County decision that illegally subdivided Open Space land. By filing a legal brief with the Oregon Court of Appeals, Friends helped protect Native American cultural resources from a harmful mining proposal. And Friends joined the Hood River community in opposing a 186,000-square-foot Wal-Mart “superstore,” which was denied by the county commissioners.

Protecting Forest Resources

The rate of logging in the National Scenic Area exploded in 2003, especially on private land. Friends helped stem the tide with two important victories in Skamania and Clark Counties. In one appeal, Friends successfully blocked a forest clearcut even as the chainsaws were buzzing. A superior court judge enjoined the clearcut and ruled that the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) had unlawfully interpreted Gorge protection rules to create a loophole that did not exist. In the second victory, Friends convinced the DNR to deny a proposed clearcut because the landowner had concealed plans to construct a road for future residential development on the cleared land.

Bea Case Resolved

Friends continued our participation in settlement discussions involving the infamous Bea house. Although Friends did not endorse the final settlement agreement, our involvement led to a much better settlement than would otherwise have been approved by Skamania County and the Gorge Commission. The settlement reduced the visible surface area of the house and required substantial measures to better screen the house from key viewing areas.

► VOLUNTEERS

By Betsy Toll, Volunteer Coordinator
betsy@gorgefriends.org

Friends' Outdoor Programs

Our 2003 hiking program offered 57 spring outings and 10 hikes in autumn. More than 1500 outdoor enthusiasts had the chance to hike, explore, and enjoy the treasure that is the Columbia Gorge.

Our hiking program was supported by 40 volunteer hike leaders from 20 other outdoor organizations, and 72 volunteer hike shepherds, providing great outdoor recreation and education, as well as fun volunteers opportunities, for Gorge lovers.

Stewardship in the Gorge

In 2003, nearly 200 volunteers participated in 13 stewardship workdays with Friends at Bridal Veil State Park. Volunteers ranged from kindergarten children to senior citizens, rooting out blackberry and ivy, and planting native species. Dedicated volunteers even hauled water to new plants in the driest months of summer.

Gorge Activism

Our email listserve sent 32 posts to hundreds of activists in 2003, generating 900 letters, phone calls and comments to elected officials, the Forest Service and the Gorge Commission. More than 100 individuals showed up at hearings and meetings. Activists urged stronger protections for Gorge landscapes, natural habitat, recreation opportunities, and cultural resources.

1,700 Acres of Critical Land Purchased to Date

The U.S. Forest Service continues to make strides in land acquisition in the Gorge. In 2003, close to 800 acres were purchased in the National Scenic Area. Combined with approximately 900 acres purchased in 2002, in this two-year period the Forest Service has purchased over 1,700 acres for open space, natural habitat, and recreational use.

Even as the Forest Service moves forward to purchase critical lands, the biggest challenge continues to be the lack of federal funding. The Forest Service expects to receive only $1 million in 2004 for Gorge land acquisition, despite their indications that $15 million is needed to adequately protect the landscapes.

Many of the lands that have been offered to the Forest Service are fast approaching their three-year deadline. If the Forest Service has not made offers by the deadline, zoning will become less restrictive, and more development will result.

Given this short time-line and the lack of federal funding, 2004 will be a critical year for Gorge land acquisition.

A Vision for the Gorge

This year, Friends' Board of Directors created a vision statement expressing our long-term hopes, goals, and vision for the Columbia Gorge. In years to come, the defining phrase of that vision will become familiar to Gorge lovers everywhere:

Friends of the Columbia Gorge: Working to ensure that the beautiful and wild Columbia Gorge remains a place apart, an unspoiled treasure for generations to come.

The full vision document will be included in our spring newsletter in May. It is also available on our website at www.gorgefriends.org.

Fundraising Year in Review

By Jane Haley-Harris, Development Director, jane@gorgefriends.org

Next to the Gorge, our members are our strongest asset. In 2003, contributions and gifts from Friends' members came in 11% higher than projected, including bequests and gifts to the endowment. And our membership grew by 571 new members this year.

Much of this success was due to a strategic decision to enhance our grassroots organizing and membership programs by working together to create events, outings and opportunities for public activism that better engage our members. Restoration projects, an expanded hiking program that includes member only hikes, and an effort to hold a number of small events in local communities have all helped us exceed our goals this year for membership development. This is particularly important during a time when foundation giving is down and many groups with less vigorous public support are struggling.

Our sincere thanks to each and every member who made Gorge protection a priority in 2003.
